The Hawthorne Airport

The Hawthorne Airport, also known as the Jack Northrup Field, was built in 1942 during the midst of the Second World War. During the war, the airfield earned the nickname, "the cradle of aviation" and was used by the US Air Force's Service Command as an aircraft modification center and Air Transport Command to ferry new aircraft to operational units abroad. From their Hawthorne headquarters, the Northrop Aircraft Corporation quickly became a major military aircraft manufacturer and subcontractor to other aircraft companies and developed planes such as the B-2 stealth bomber and the P-61 Black Widow. 75 years later, with SpaceX now calling it home, Hawthorne remains one of the country's most significant aviation and aeronautical hubs.

The City & The Sea

Known as "the town between the city and the sea," the City of Hawthorne boasts a proud history of residents. World famous entertainers from the Beach Boys to Marilyn Monroe, along with professional athletes from the NBA, NFL, MLB, MLS and Gold Medal Olympians have called Hawthorne home. Visionaries like Jack Northrop and Elon Musk have made Hawthorne their place of business in California. Today, Hawthorne is home to a burgeoning economic community, with Tesla and SpaceX among the more than 6,500 corporations currently doing business.
